Together we will explore in this course how our mind set, values, attitudes and personal background shape the way in which we interact with others. We will find ways to widen our perception and change our perspective.

After this seminar, you will have practical tools at your disposal to experience and analyse complex intercultural situations from a point of curiosity and openness and you will be well on your way to develop the cultural agility that is required in today's engineering world.

This seminar will be taught in English.

The course consists of 12 hours and will be taught online. There will be an open book exam at the end and students receive 1 ECTS for this course.
