DIVERSITY FILM SERIES

Discover cultures and expand networks

The Diversity film series was founded 2008 at the TUM Language Center to bring German students closer to other cultures and to show that cultural variety is societally enriching. Since then the series has been run in cooperation with the nearby University of Television and Film (HFF) Munich, where the films are shown in a real cinema. Frequently graduation films of HFF Alumni are shown, who attend the screenings and take the opportunity to discuss with the public – in different languages, as you would expect.

The film takes a tour of strife-ridden Europe and follows four couples from Ireland, Greece, Spain and Estonia. It deals with love, passion, sex, children and everyday struggles. A film about the politics of love. Director Jan Gassmann will attend to present his graduation film.

“Understanding foreign films on a purely linguistic level isn’t so easy. Visual impressions nonetheless provide a great deal of nonverbal information about how people in other countries communicate with each other. For me, learning this nonverbal communication is also part of a good language lesson.”

Marie Miyayama-Sinz
studied directing at HFF Munich and has since been a Japanese instructor at the TUM Language Center. She organizes the Diversity film series.
